BHUTAN

(SEPTEMBER 13-19)

- Revised tariff rates for High Voltage users from 2011; Nepal-Bhutan trade talks to be held in November 2011

Power tariffs in Bhutan are set to be revised and the subsidies for high voltage (HV) users will end by 2011. For the medium voltage (MV) users, subsidy will end in 2020. However, with regards to the low voltage (LV) or household users, the policy does not mention when subsidy will end. Because of this move, confusion has surfaced regarding the subsidy rates, as seventy percent electricity in Bhutan is consumed by high voltage (HV) users. Allegations have been made that high voltage tariffs have a hidden subsidy element in them.<sup>1</sup>

On the bilateral front, Bhutan and Nepal will hold trade talks on November 2010. Bhutan's export to Nepal during 2008-09 was around Rs 300 billion whereas Bhutan's import from Nepal was at Rs 200 million.<sup>2</sup>

MYANMAR (SEPTEMBER 13-19)

- Detained opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi barred from casting vote in November elections; Election commission abolishes NLD and other parties; NLD supporters warned against dissent over its dissolution; Myanmar's elections to be held on township basis, not population basis; Burma excludes some areas from electoral process

Myanmar's detained opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi is officially barred from voting in November elections. According to electoral rolls posted on Monday Suu Kyi's name did not figure in the list of eligible voters. Ahead of the November 7 polls, the junta had enacted several laws aimed at effectively banning the Nobel laureate from voting the electoral rolls, posted at local election commission offices officially confirmed it.<sup>23</sup>

Burmese state media have warned the political party of the opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi National League for Democracy (NLD), to drop protests against its dissolution and have threatened jail for anyone who impedes the coming election. An election commission announcement abolished the NLD and other parties on the grounds that they had failed to register for the poll drew strong criticism from outside the country.<sup>24</sup>

Elections in Burma conducted on the basis of townships could mire candidates contesting the 7 November polls in trouble as military junta's elections will not be based on population, but on townships.<sup>25</sup>

According to Myanmar officials some ethnic minority areas will not be allowed to vote in the November 7 poll as the atmosphere there is not conducive to a "free and fair" election. In this regard, more than 200 villages will be excluded from voting. The villages are in the ethnic minority states of Kachin, Kayah, Kayin, Mon and Shan, having bases of armed rebel groups.<sup>26</sup>
