The initiative for setting up the Institute came from the then Defence Minister, Shri Yeshwantrao Chavan, who was one of the Institute's founding members. Over the last fifty-plus years, MP-IDSA has played a crucial role in shaping India's foreign and security policies, including with respect to nuclear weapons, military expenditure, and conventional and non-conventional threats to India. MP-IDSA is governed by an Executive Council (EC), whose members are distinguished personalities from various walks of life. The Council is headed by a President. It is supported by committees covering different aspects of the Institute's work. Executive Council Committees include: Human Resources and Academic Committee (HR & AC), Finance and Administrative Committee (F & AC) and Membership Committee (MC). While Foreign Secretary, Defence Secretary, DG, DDG and Staff Representative are the Ex- Officio members, other members of the Council are elected for two-year term at the Annual General Body meeting (AGM). List of its head from time to time is mentioned in the Annual Report. The details of centres are given in the institute's website (www.idsa.in/researchcentres).
