In another development, according to reports, addressing a gathering of thousands of supporters, former Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra promised to return to Thailand. The rally was held on April 14, 2012 in Siem Reap, Cambodia. Thaksin supporters have been traveling to Siem Reap via road from Thailand since April 11.<sup>13</sup> Thaksin, ousted by a 2006 military coup after being accused of abuse of power and disrespect for the monarchy, led a song-filled rally to mark Songkran, the Thai New Year.<sup>14</sup>

According to reports, thousands of US soldiers are to participate in two weeks of war games in the Philippines starting on April 16, 2012, as the two nations look to strengthen their military alliance. The Balikatan (Shoulder-to-shoulder) exercises are an annual event but this year are expected to attract a greater focus with some of the drills set to be held close to sensitive South China Sea waters claimed by the Chinese. The Philippines has insisted the exercises, involving 4,500 US personnel and 2,300 Filipino troops, should not be seen by China as a provocation.<sup>15</sup>

However, China, Philippine discussions on April 14, 2012 reportedly ended in stalemate as five Chinese ships left the Scarborough Shoal with alleged illegal haul of natural resources. The development ends a tense standoff between the two nations that started on April 10, 2012. Chinese vessels blocked Coast Guard ships trying to arrest Chinese fishermen said to be catching endangered coral, giant clams and black-tipped sharks. The Philippines wanted to confiscate the cargo, while China said the fishermen would be subject to Chinese law.<sup>16</sup>

In other developments, according to the media reports, East Timor is ready to conduct polls, which are due on April 16, 2012. The final elections, in which Taur Matan Ruak is competing against the Fretilin Party candidate Francisco Guterres Lu'olo, are considered crucial for the country. However, the election observer Professor Damien Kingsbury confirmed the reports that situation in the country is tense as several complaints have been made to authorities since the election began. However, he added that so far the allegations have not been substantiated.<sup>17</sup>

In another development, according to reports, China warned the US on April 21, 2012 that the US-Philippine military exercises have raised risks of armed confrontation over the disputed South China Sea, in the toughest high-level warning yet after weeks of tension. China's official Liberation Army Daily warned that recent jostling with the Philippines over disputed seas where both countries have sent ships could boil over into outright conflict, and laid much of the blame at Washington's door.

Meanwhile, reports noted that American and Filipino troops launched two weeks of annual naval drills on April 16, 2012 amid the stand-off between Beijing and Manila, who have accused each other of encroaching on sovereign seas near the Scarborough Shoal, west of a former US navy base at Subic Bay.<sup>19</sup>

Reports noted that Japan has agreed to write off more than $3.7bn (£2.29bn) of debt owed by Myanmar and to resume development aid. The accord came at talks on April 21, 2012 in Tokyo between the countries' leaders. They also agreed to plan a special economic zone near Rangoon. Myanmar has begun political and economic reforms in the past year, since a civilian-led government ended nearly 50 years of direct military rule.<sup>20</sup>

Further, Japan has pledged US $7.4 billion in development aid to five Southeast Asia nations in an effort to promote cooperation with countries in the Mekong region. Also Japan said on April 21, 2012 that it will resume aid as a way to support the country's democratic and economic reforms in Myanmar. Japanese Prime Minister Yoshihiko Noda announced the pledge at a Japan-Mekong summit in Tokyo on April 21, 2012.<sup>21</sup>

However, according to reports, Myanmar's opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi and elected members of her party on April 21, 2012 announced they will postpone attending parliament until changes are made to the swearing-in oath to the country's pro-military constitution. NLD leader Suu Kyi and 36 other members of Myanmar's main opposition party who won seats in the April 1 by-elections were initially scheduled to be sworn in to Parliament in the capital Naypyitaw, 350 kilometres north of Yangon, on April 23, 2012.<sup>22</sup>

In other developments, according to reports, the Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) on April 20, 2012 announced that Singapore will make a bilateral loan of US$4 billion to the IMF but stressed that this contribution will be by way of contingent loans to the Fund, and not directly to countries borrowing from it. Thus, Singapore joined the ranks of the Group of 20 (G-20) countries by contributing a US$4 billion (S$5 billion) loan to the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to help troubled economies. This is part of the broader international effort to boost the IMF's lending capacity, which managing director Christine Lagarde wants to increase by US$400 billion.<sup>24</sup>

II. DEFENCE REVIEW

National

(April 9-15, 2012)

- Indian Air Force facing critical deficiency; Agni V all set for launch

According to reports, the Indian Air Force is facing "critical deficiency" of trainer aircraft and simulators, fighter squadrons are depleting and some airfields do not have certain landing facilities. The IAF has 34 fighter squadrons against the sanctioned strength of 42 squadrons and the number is likely to reduce further to 31 during the 12th plan period, the parliamentary Standing Committee on Defence was told during a recent presentation by top officials of IAF and the Defence Ministry.

<sup>40</sup> "Five killed in Iraq violence," Khaleej Times, April 15, 2012, at http://www.khaleejtimes.com/kt-article-display-1.asp?xfile=/data/middleeast/2012/April/middleeast\_April206.xml&section=middleeast

The IAF also has critical shortage of simulators as well. It was also pointed out that out of 52 air operational fields, 10 air fields do not have static electrical airfield lighting system (AFLS).<sup>41</sup>

In another development, reports noted that, in the remote Wheeler Island off the Odisha coast, the countdown has begun for the first test of India's most sophisticated and powerful ballistic missile ever built, Agni V. The Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) which built the missile, is expected to launch Agni V on Wednesday, April 18, 2012, from the Island. With a planned range of 5,000 km, the Agni V will traverse 2,000 km more than any Indian missile has ever done. Wednesday's launch will see the missile first power its way to a vertical height of 500 km in the atmosphere before following a ballistic trajectory that will see it splash down in the Indian Ocean way beyond Indonesia. A commercial jetliner would take over six hours to traverse such a distance. But Agni V, travelling at 24 times the speed of sound and 30 times faster than a commercial jet, will traverse that distance in just 18 to 20 minutes. In doing so, it will become not just the longest range ballistic missile in India's strategic armoury but also its fastest. Most importantly, Agni V would put most of China's major cities, including Beijing and Shanghai, within Indian missile range. Vijay Kumar Saraswat, DRDO Chief and Scientific Adviser to the Union Defence Minister, said, "In terms of performance, Agni V is the ultimate step for India in terms of ballistic missile technology. It is pushing at the outer limits of the Intermediate Range Ballistic Missile (IRBM) class."<sup>42</sup>

(April 16-22, 2012)

- Indigenous long-range missile Agni-V test fired successfully; Admiral Gorshkov to be commissioned in the Indian Navy on December 4, 2012

In a significant development, reports noted that India has successfully tested an indigenous long-range missile that can carry a nuclear warhead and brings within striking distance targets as far as Shanghai, invoking pride within the country while rattling the state-controlled Chinese media. Literally meaning fire, Agni-V, the surface-to-surface missile launched from the Wheeler Island off the Odisha coast at 8:07 am on April 19, 2012 propelled India into the small group of nations that possess intercontinental ballistic missiles. Agni-V is expected to significantly add to India's firepower and enhance its deterrent capability because none of its earlier missiles has the range to cover China. The 17.5 metre-tall and two metre-wide missile, which can carry a nuclear warhead of more than one tonne, rose to a height of 600 km before hitting its target more than 5,000 km away in the Indian ocean, reports said. "We had a successful launch of Agni-V," said VK Saraswat, chief of the Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO), which developed the missile. "This launch has given a message to the entire world that India has the capability to design, develop, build and manufacture missiles of this class, and we are today a missile power."

● North Korea's long-range rocket test failed; The Defence Trade Cooperation Treaty (DTCT) between US and UK enters into force;

According to reports, North Korea's long-range rocket test ended in failure on April 13, 2012, disintegrating in mid air soon after blast off and plunging into the sea. The defiant launch drew condemnation from world leaders who described it as a "provocative" act that threatened regional security, despite Pyongyang insisting it was intended to put a satellite into orbit for peaceful purposes. The North admitted the satellite had failed to enter orbit and that "scientists, technicians and experts are now looking into the cause of the failure." The United States and its allies slammed the exercise as a disguised ballistic missile test that contravened United Nations resolutions triggered by Pyongyang's two nuclear tests. White House spokesman Jay Carney said, "North Korea is only further isolating itself by engaging in provocative acts and is wasting its money on weapons and propaganda displays while the North Korean people go hungry". United Nations Chief Ban Ki-moon condemned the launch as "deplorable" and said it "defies the firm and unanimous stance of the international community." The debris fell into the Yellow Sea off South Korea, and its navy launched a salvage operation to retrieve the debris, despite warnings from Pyongyang last week not to attempt such an operation.<sup>45</sup>

In another development, reports noted that the Defence Trade Cooperation Treaty (DTCT) between the United States and the United Kingdom officially entered into force on April 13, 2012. The treaty, signed in 2007 and ratified in 2010, is intended to ease the export of defense articles between the two countries by reducing the need for export licenses and other International Traffic in Arms

- Philippine raises pitch against Chinese aggressiveness in the South China Sea; China and Russia launch their first joint naval exercises in the Yellow Sea

According to reports, Philippine President Benigno Aquino warned his country’s neighbors on April 23, 2012 that they should fear Beijing’s growing aggressiveness over its claims in the South China Sea. The President stressed that China’s territorial claims spanned a huge area and were getting “closer and closer” to the Philippine archipelago. Aquino stated, “They claim this entire body of water practically. Look at what is excluded and what they are claiming... so how can the others not be fearful of what is transpiring?”. It would be worth noting that Manila and Beijing have been locked in a standoff over Scarborough, a group of islands in the South China Sea, since Chinese vessels blocked Philippine attempts to arrest eight Chinese fishing boats’ crews earlier this month. China claims almost the entire South China Sea and is also locked in disputes with Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) countries Brunei, Malaysia and Vietnam, as well as its rival Taiwan.<sup>47</sup>

Meanwhile, according to reports, China and Russia launched their first joint naval exercises on April 22, 2012, with war games in the Yellow Sea that come amid tensions between China and its Asian neighbors over territorial claims. The six days of drills are taking place off China’s east coast, the official Xinhua news agency said. China has 16 naval vessels and two submarines taking part in the exercises, while Russia has four warships, according to state media. They will focus on joint air defense, anti-submarine tactics and search and rescue, as well as simulated rescue of hijacked vessels and anti-terrorism drills. Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Liu Weimin said on April 19, 2012, “This joint military exercise is a long-scheduled one between China and Russia in order to uphold regional peace and stability”. China and Russia have together participated in four military exercises since 2005, some involving other countries.<sup>48</sup>

According to reports, suspected militants killed a police officer at police post-Bagyas-Chattabal, near Darish Kadal in the old city. In another development, reports noted that the third round of dialogue between pro-talk ULFA and Government concluded on a positive note, with the Centre claiming to have made tangible progress. The negotiations held at North Block lasted for over 90 minutes. ULFA chairman Arabinda Rajkhowa describing the talks as 'very satisfactory, said discussions were held on the charter of demands presented by the outfit, last year. The next round of talks is now expected to be held after about two months after consultations between the pro-talk group and Centre's interlocutor, PC Halder. Following the meeting with the ULFA leaders, the Union Home Secretary held a separate round of meeting with State Government officials, ostensibly to take stock of the peace process.<sup>56</sup>

However, according to reports, the Meghalaya Government served a week's ultimatum to the Garo National Liberation Army (GNLA) to surrender all its arms before the government or else 'force' would be used against them according to officials. The ultimatum was served following police reports that a large number of youngsters were presently at the camp of the GNLA apart from few armed militants according to Meghalaya Director General of Police N Ramachandran. The police chief warned that security forces will be compelled to use 'lethal arms' as the militants are equipped with 'sophisticated' weapons. Intelligence sources said about 120 persons were presently housed in the main camp identified by the police in one of the thick jungles of Garo Hills.<sup>57</sup>

According to reports, forest personnel in Assam were attacked on April 11, 2012 by armed men from Arunachal Pradesh near the Assam-Arunachal border in Lakhimpur district, creating fresh tension. Official sources said a group of unidentified persons, heavily armed with guns and bow and arrows, and attacked forest personnel engaged in plantation at Duluong in the Lakhimpur district. Security forces posted along the border rushed to the spot and brought the situation under control. The forces are maintaining a strict vigil in the area.<sup>58</sup>

In other developments, according to reports, suspected militants triggered a grenade blast at remote Bordumsa area in Tinsukia district of Assam-Arunachal Pradesh border. According to police no one was injured. The grenade was lobbed by two motor cycle-borne youth just outside the Bordumsa police outpost. Although police have not named any particular militant for the blast, locals have pointed fingers at the anti-talk faction of the ULFA rebels led by Paresh Baruah alias Paresh Asom, who are very active in the area. There have also been reports of massive extortion drive by the anti-talk faction of the ULFA militants in the area.<sup>59</sup>

According to reports, the hardline faction of the United Liberation Front of Asom (ULFA) is getting desperate for money and most of the intercepts of discussions between the senior leaders of the outfit were on collection of funds. The senior leaders of the outfit themselves started calling up people demanding money, while, those inside India are also receiving calls from their senior leaders on the same issue. Sources revealed that Paresh Baruah, apart from using the channels of the ULFA, has his own channels to collect money directly and he is still calling up people directly demanding substantial amounts of money. Sources claimed that Paresh Baruah collects money through some sympathizers and according to intelligence inputs, he recently managed to send some money to Bangladesh, proving that though he had to escape from that country, he is still maintaining links there.<sup>60</sup>

In another development reports noted that after its seven day surrender offer was ignored by the Garo National Liberation Army (GNLA), Meghalaya police asserted it would now be 'ruthless' against the militant outfit. Last week, Meghalaya police served the GNLA a deadline of seven days to surrender with their weapons. The militant outfit, however, gave scant respect to the ultimatum. According to police estimates, there are about 120 -130 unarmed cadres in the GNLA camps, mostly teenagers. He said that the police does not want to shed "unnecessary blood" and therefore has given adequate time to the young cadres to decide about their future.<sup>61</sup>

According to reports, residents of Ukhrul town under the aegis of Committee for Release of Ningkhan Shimray comprising Tangkhul frontier organisations and Tashar western areas chiefs associations took to the streets demanding early release of NSCN (IM)'s head of foreign affairs Ningkhan Anthony Shimray without any condition. The speakers at the meeting called for immediate release of Anthony, who is presently lodged at Tihar Jail, for a meaningful peace process.<sup>62</sup>

However, reports noted that the General Secretary of the Karbi People's Liberation Tiger (KPLT), Nilip Engchi and four other members of the outfit were killed on the spot and one got serious bullet injuries during an encounter with Assam Police and security forces in the wee hours on the hill track of the Harlong Woti of Borpong under the Chowkihol Police Station in East Karbi Anglong.<sup>63</sup>

Meanwhile, reports noted that though the level of violence in the entire North East region is coming down gradually over the years, the situation in Manipur remains a cause of concern, while, inter-factional clashes between militant groups in Nagaland is also causing concern. According to the annual report of the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA), as many as 498 civilians and 79 security force personnel were killed in acts of violence by militants in the North east region in 2007, but the figure is gradually coming down and last year, 70 civilians and 32 security personnel were killed by militants. The report said that 31 persons were killed in Assam last year by militants as compared to 65 in the previous year. The report said that talks with militant groups like both factions of the DHD and KNLF have been concluded and peace accords would be signed shortly, while, talks are also on with pro-talk faction of the ULFA, NDFB(P) are going on.<sup>64</sup>

In other developments, according to reports, the stand off between the Assam Rifles and the NSCN-IM completed days with no sign of easing and have spread to Manipur. The current quagmire was triggered by the incident where the NSCN-IM had detained five Assam Rifles jawans after snatching their weapons. The Assam Rifles personnel traveling in a truck allegedly 'trespassed' into Hebron Camp area violating the ceasefire ground rules which prompted the Naga militants to act, a source said. In Manipur, security forces personnel in large numbers were rushed to the vicinity of NSCN-IM designated camps.<sup>65</sup>
