- International medical charity leaves Afghanistan; Quetta Shura Taliban leader killed; Considering plan to leave significant force in Afghanistan; Terrorists wounded in Afghanistan rounded up from hospital in Karachi; four new provincial governors appointed; Afghanistan to sign a deal for delivery of Mi-35 gunships; US asks NATO for flexible Afghan draw down plans.

The International medical charity Doctors Without Borders said on October 4 it had withdrawn from the northern Afghan city of Kunduz after a deadly airstrike destroyed its hospital and killed 19 people. The humanitarian crisis in the city, which briefly fell to the Taliban last week before the government launched a counteroffensive, has been growing increasingly dire, with shops shuttered because of ongoing fighting and roads made impassable by mines planted by insurgents. "All critical patients have been referred to other health facilities and no MSF staffs are working in our hospital," said Kate Stegeman, the communications manager for Doctors Without Borders, using the French acronym for the organization. "Some of our medical staff has gone to work in two hospitals where some of the wounded have been taken," she added. Investigations are continuing into the bombing of the hospital on Saturday, which killed at least 19 people, including 12 MSF staffers. The group blames a U.S. airstrike for the death and destruction. Afghan officials said helicopter gunships returned fire from Taliban fighters who were hiding in the facility.¹

Shekh Wali, a Taliban local leader and member of the Quetta Shura of Pakistan has been killed in a clash with security forces in Faryab. Abdul Satar Barez, acting governor of Faryab says hundreds of Taliban insurgents attacked Maymana, the capital of Faryab, from four different angles on October 5 evening and "wanted to take control of the city but security forces drove them out." "The security forces drove insurgents out after 11 hours of clashes in which 23 Taliban insurgents including the Taliban's shadow governor and member of Quetta Shura of Pakistan was killed," he said. In addition, 13 other insurgents were injured in the clashes. Barez believes that this attack was organized in Pakistan and Shekh Wali led the offensive in the province. "Our investigations show that the battle was planned in Pakistan and Shekh Wali led it. He was also a member of Quetta Shura of Pakistan and he was killed in the attack," he added.²

President Obama is seriously weighing a plan to keep as many as 5,000 U.S. troops in Afghanistan beyond 2016, according to senior U.S. officials, a further setback of his goal to end U.S. military involvement there before he leaves office. The plan presented in August by Gen. Martin E. Dempsey, then-chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, would focus primarily on counterterrorism operations against the Islamic State, al-Qaeda and other direct threats to the United States. Obama has made no final decision on the proposal, which was developed before the Taliban captured Kunduz last month, the first major Afghan city to fall to the Taliban since the war began in 2001. Afghan security forces, supported by American planes and combat advisers, have since been able to retake most, if not all, of the city. But the initial collapse of the Afghan forces in Kunduz has fed long-standing worries that Afghan forces lack the necessary air support, logistics and intelligence capabilities to survive on their own after U.S. service members leave the country.³

Police officials in Karachi city of Pakistan have arrested a group of terrorists from a hospital who had fought in Afghanistan. According to news published by Pakistan's ARY news agency on October 5, Inspector General Sindh Police Ghulam Hyder Jamali has said that several terrorists wounded in Afghanistan were arrested from a hospital in Karachi where they were being treated. Afghan leaders have said in numerous occasions that terrorists fighting in Afghanistan are being treated in Pakistan. They have asked the country's authorities to stop supporting and treating them. According to the National Directorate of Security, Taliban Supreme Leader Mullah Mohammad Omar was also admitted to a hospital in Karachi where he died in April 2013.⁴

President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani has appointed four new provincial governors, the Independent Directorate of Local Governance (IDLG) announced on October 7. The four new governors were recommended by IDLG and approved by Presidential Palace. A statement released by IDLG states that Mohammad Yaseen Zia has been appointed as the governor for Takhar, Zahir Wahdat for Sar-e-Pul, Sayed Anwar Sadat for Faryab and Abdul Sattar Bariz for Baghlan province. Mohammad Yaseen Zia was a deputy to the former director of National Directorate of Security (NDS). Zahir Wahdat has worked as the deputy governor for Balkh province. Sayed Anwar Sadat has served as the representative of the people of Sar-e-Pul province at Wolesi Jirga or the Lower House of Parliament. Abdul Sattar Bariz has served as the deputy governor for Faryab province. The new appointments in northern part of the country come as it is going through severe insecurity under the leadership of acting governor.⁵

Without disclosing the exact the agreement would be signed, Kabulov, said the Russian President Vladimir Putin has instructed Moscow to deliver the gunships to Afghanistan in a bid to boost the capabilities of the Afghan army. "Russia is already providing certain assistance in strengthening the capabilities of the Afghan government forces," Kabulov quoted by local media said. Kabul further added that Russia delivers weaponry to Afghanistan and provides military training for Afghan officers.⁶

The United States defence secretary, Ashton Carter, has asked NATO allies in a meeting on October 8 in Brussels to remain flexible when they review their plans of troop withdrawal from Afghanistan. Carter said a number of NATO allies indicated a willingness to review their plans. "I was very pleased to hear ministers of defence from our NATO partners reaffirm their commitment – discussing not whether but how to continue the mission in Afghanistan. It is of course the view of the United States," Carter said. He said that they are continuing the mission in a 3-step action plan. The first step was when President Barack Obama decided in March this year to maintain 9 800 US troops in Afghanistan until the end of this year. The original plan had suggested keeping only 5500 troops by the end of 2015.⁷

The United States has assured Pakistan that it will continue to support the government's efforts to defeat militancy from North Waziristan to Karachi. In a policy statement, read out at a convention convened by the Pakistan Embassy, US Deputy Special Representative Jonathan Carpenter also reiterated Washington's offer of "tangible material" support to democracy in the country. Pakistan's Ambassador Jalil Abbas Jilani opened the convention, informing the participants that US-Pakistan relations were "much stable" now and the two countries were looking for new avenues to further this relationship. But Mr Carpenter, whose office looks after US ties with Pakistan and Afghanistan, gave a candid review of this relationship and how he saw it unfolding in the near future. "The government of Pakistan, across all its agencies civil, military, intelligence, is engaged in a full-throttle battle against extremism within its borders," he said, while pointing to the sacrifices that the Pakistani armed forces had made in North Waziristan.⁸

China will build in Karachi four of eight submarines that it is selling to Pakistan. Minister for Defence Production Rana Tanveer Hussain told at the inauguration of the Defence Export Promotion Organisation (DEPO) Display Centre in the federal capital that the deal for the acquisition of submarines from China had been finalised and four of them would be built. He further said that construction of the submarines would simultaneously begin in Pakistan and China. China, he said, would transfer the technology to Pakistan for submarine construction. The implementation of the agreement would augment the existing submarine related capacity. One of the three Agosta 90-B submarines in Navy's fleet — PNS Hamza commissioned in 2008 — was assembled at the Karachi Shipyard and Engineering Works. The other two Agosta 90-B submarines — PNS Khalid and PNS Saad — were also indigenously overhauled and retrofitted with air-independent propulsion (AIP) systems in 2011.¹⁰

The Chief of the Army Staff (COAS), General Raheel Sharif, on October 7 emphasised the need for cadets to remain abreast about the latest regional and global environment and developments. As part of its continuing efforts to preserve Sri Lanka's cultural and religious heritage, the Embassy of the United States of America announced new grants totalling $300,000 to help restore the ancient Buddhist Rajagala Monastery and improve preservation of artefacts at the Anuradhapura Archaeological Museum. The Indian Minister of External Affairs, Sushma Swaraj made a visit to the Maldives upon invitation of Maldivian Foreign Minister, Dunya Maumoon on October 10 to participate in the fifth Maldives-India Joint Commission. During the visit, the Indian External Minister met with President Abdulla Yamin on October 11 and discussed the relationship between the two countries. A press release issued by the Indian High Commission said that President Yamin requested to India to host an Investors Forum for Maldivian investors. Trade, connectivity, education, health and heritage relations between the two countries were discussed along with the environment at the Maldives-India Joint Commission meeting. The joint commission between India and the Maldives was formed in 1986 to support and strengthen relations between the two countries. Outside the meeting of the Joint Commission, the two countries signed two MoUs to provide support for the Maldivian sports and the Foreign Institute which is under the Foreign Ministry. The Indian High Commission said that the Maldives pledge support in India's effort to become a member of the U.N. Security Council in the talks between the officials of the two countries. Jared Genser of the President's legal team notes a number of things that are considered unjust during the trial. And so the report notes that some of the judges that could affect the trial being part of the trial and not giving adequate time to prepare a defence and the former President not having a lawyer at some point of the trial. The other thing noted by the WGAD is not giving the opportunity to assign a lawyer once the original lawyers left the case. It is also noted that only a few number of people were allowed inside the court room for the hearings.

The WGAD believes that the former President was deprived of a fair trial along with the right to prove his innocence saying that the Criminal Court's decision to sentence the former President to 13 years in prison was unfair. Speaking at a press conference on October 5, lawyer Ibrahim Riffath of the former President's defence team said that international treaties signed by the Maldives makes it compulsory for the Government to obey the decision made by the UNWGAD. Ministry of Foreign Affairs however, has rejected the UNWGAD decision. The ministry said that the UN cannot make a decision on a case which is going through the legal process of the Maldives, on which the highest court has not yet issued a verdict. Meanwhile Maldivian Democratic Party (MDP) National Council passed a resolution calling for sanctions against the government's rejection of the UNWGAD's decision. Later MDP held a march in Malé calling for the release of former president Mohamed Nasheed. Speaking at the event, MP Rozaina Adam said that the purpose of the march was not only to call for Nasheed's release, but also demand basic human rights for the general public.²³

The two sides exchanged opinion on ‘wide-range of issues including development of bilateral relations in political-diplomatic, trade-economic, investment, cultural-humanitarian and other spheres.’ They also considered the prospect of strengthening ties at both the Uzbekistan-EU format, as well as within the UN and other organizations.⁷⁵

Russia’s Defence Ministry has said, on October 7, that it will strengthen its 201st Motorized Rifle Division based in Tajikistan by assigning a number of Mi-24P and Mi-8MTV helicopters to the base. The aircraft will be used to provide air cover for military columns, deliver airborne forces and cargo, carry out reconnaissance missions, and evacuate the sick and wounded. The air base is located around 170 kilometres north of the Tajik border with Afghanistan.⁷⁷

Tajik authorities have arrested 23 top officials of the now illegal Islamic Renaissance Party (IPRT), with many accused of supporting the mutiny of a former serving Deputy Defence Minister in September 2015. The suspects face charges of inciting religious and racial hatred, terrorism and attempting to seize power. A few of them have also been charged with fraud, forgery and other crimes. Earlier in September, the country’s Supreme Court had banned IRPT on the grounds of being an extremist and terrorist organisation.⁷⁸

Tajik President Emomali Rahmon, during a meeting with Russian President Putin held in Sochi on October 6, has expressed concern over the tense situation along the shared border with Afghanistan. He added that the 'situation was getting worse by the day.'⁷⁹

Tajikistan's Ministry of Defence has said that the Ayni airfield has not been leased to Russia. It stated 'the airfield belongs to the Tajik Defence Ministry and Russia's plan to deploy its attack helicopters at the Ayni airfield does not mean that it is leased to Russia.' It is likely that Russia will use the airfield within the framework of Collective Security Treaty Organization (CSTO).⁸⁰

Iranian Majlis Speaker Ali Larijani said that Russia consulted with Iran before taking military action against Daesh - also called ISIL and ISIS - in Syria. Larijani made the remarks in a joint press conference with Bogdan Borusewicz, the speaker of the Polish Senate, in Tehran. Larijani said it is too soon to make judgment about the success of Russia's attacks on terrorists inside Syria. However, he said Russia's attacks on ISIL positions have been "precise".⁸³

Iran has started a new round of negotiations with South Korean firms to help the country develop renewable-energy plants. Top officials of the Iranian Ministry of Energy met with representatives of Hyundai, Tucson, and LSLC companies, as well as the Export-Import Bank of Korea, known as the Korea Eximbank (KEXIM), in Tehran. Iranian Oil Minister Bijan Namdar Zanganeh and Armenian Energy and Natural Resources Minister Yervand Zakharyan negotiated for rising Iran's exports of gas to Armenia in exchange for boosting the country's imports of electricity from its neighbour. Zanganeh reminded that the framework for the bilateral cooperation will be as before; adding that the details of boosting Iran-Armenia gas-for-electricity trade will be studied afterwards.⁸⁴

Syrian Information Minister Omran Zoubi said that Syrian terrorist groups which Washington calls moderate get all kinds of foreign help – funds, modern weapons, management, and governance. Several armed groups operating in Syria, which the West considers to be moderate opposition, are receiving outside help, including from operations centres in Turkey and Jordan, Syrian Information Minister Omran Zoubi told Sputnik. Damascus has repeatedly accused Ankara of providing support to extremist groups operating in Syria. In April, the Syrian Foreign Ministry accused Turkey of providing direct logistical and military support to terrorist organizations, while Saudi Arabia and Qatar were accused of facilitating the infiltration of foreign militants into the country.⁸⁷

The goal of the so-called US-led anti-terror coalition was proved to have aimed at supporting and maintaining terrorism plus prolonging the crisis in Syria, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs and Expatriates Faysal al- Mikdad has underscored. He pointed out that Syria’s steadfastness in confrontation of a global terrorist war has helped the world know the real nature of the policies adopted by France, Britain and other colonialist countries towards Syria. Interviewed by the Syrian TV last night, al-Mikdad said Russia started its military operation in Syria after the US-led coalition had proved to be a failure and not serious about fighting terrorism. He added that the Russian airstrikes have made within a few days great achievements that exceeded many times what the coalition has made more than a year after it was formed.⁸⁸

The Saudi family has denied claims that their domestic helper from the south Indian state of Tamil Nadu allegedly had her hand chopped off by the employer for complaining about her work conditions, according to Saudi media reports. He added that the helper fell onto the room used for building electricity generators and her hand was cut off. India's traditional support for the Palestinian cause remains "steadfast and unwavering," and the country is ready to "work with all like-minded nations" for amicably solving the Israel-Palestinian conflict, President Pranab Mukherjee said. "Our bilateral relations with Israel are independent of our relations with Palestine. In a statement, US Secretary of Defence Ash Carter, congratulating Ambassador Michael Froman and the U.S. negotiating team for reaching a historic trade agreement with the 11 other Asia-Pacific nations that make up the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP), said on October 5 that "American military strength rests on the foundation of a vibrant economy. TPP will bolster strong economic growth by boosting exports and increasing access to growing markets."⁹⁶ Carter added that "TPP also makes strong strategic sense as a critical piece of our rebalance toward the Asia-Pacific. Our strategy is to promote an Asia-Pacific regional security architecture where everyone rises and prospers".

Air Force Reserve Major Bradley Podliska, a former investigator with the Republican-led congressional committee examining the attacks in Benghazi, Libya, in 2012, told The New York Times and CNN that in March 2015 the panel abandoned its broader investigation of the events that led up to the deaths in Benghazi of four Americans, including Ambassador J. Christopher Stevens. Podliska said he was fired after resisting pressure to focus his investigative work on Hillary Clinton and the State Department. He said the move de-emphasized other agencies involved with the attacks on the American consulate on September 11, 2012. Clinton, the front-runner for the Democratic nomination for president, and her supporters have accused House Republicans of trying to use the Benghazi committee to hobble her campaign. She recently called it "nothing but a partisan exercise." On October 10, the committee forcefully denied the allegations. It said in a statement that Podliska never raised such concerns while with the panel, and that he himself had inappropriately used

A new U.S. political survey by Quinnipiac University shows billionaire real estate mogul and Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump with a sizeable lead in three key battleground states in his bid for the presidential nomination. The former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton is holding diminished leads in the same states as she seeks the Democratic nomination.⁹⁸ Meanwhile, both presidential frontrunners Trump and Clinton reached out to Hispanic voters this past week in a bid to boost their voter support. With about 400 days before the election, opinion polls show that rivals are catching up to both frontrunners. On October 7, Clinton addressed 2,000 people at the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute. In brief remarks preceding President Barack Obama's speech on immigration, Clinton said too many people fail to see how vital Hispanic people are to the United States. Clinton also took the opportunity to lash at rivals who have made remarks some Hispanics find offensive. Leading Republican candidate Trump has said that many of the illegal immigrants from Mexico are criminals. He has not lost support for those remarks and has refused to apologize.⁹⁹

On October 8, President Barack Obama in his address to the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute slammed what he said was the growing “anti-immigrant sentiment” in American politics, in what was seen as an implicit criticism of several high-profile Republican presidential candidates. Obama did not mention any candidate by name, but he did denounce those in the Republican Party who are trying to reverse his efforts on immigration reform. President Obama said, “There's nowhere they want to go further backwards than on immigration”.¹⁰⁰

On October 9, the U.S. House of Representatives voted to end a ban on most U.S. crude oil exports. The measure passed 261 to 159 and now goes to the Senate, where analysts say it may have a more difficult time winning votes needed for passage. If the bill survives the Senate, it would go to the White House, where it faces a veto threat. The export ban was put in place after the 1970s Arab oil embargo sent prices for gasoline soaring in the United States. Oil companies and some conservative groups say the United States is now the world's largest oil producer, and they argue that exporting more U.S. crude oil will create jobs, boost economic growth and lower gasoline prices by increasing the world supply of oil.¹⁰¹

The U.S. Army General John Campbell says American forces are responsible for "mistakenly" hitting a hospital in Kunduz, Afghanistan, in an aerial bombardment that killed 22 people. Campbell told a congressional committee in Washington that Afghan forces requested the airstrike on the hospital operated by the international medical charity Doctors Without Borders because Taliban insurgents were firing from the facility. But he said the U.S. conducted the half-hour-long raid after reviewing the request.¹⁰² Regretting the loss of innocent lives in the airstrike, Defence Secretary Ash Carter also said in a statement on October 6 that "a U.S. military airstrike in Kunduz, Afghanistan, to support Afghan forces on the ground resulted in a mistaken attack on a Doctors Without Borders field hospital. Doctors Without Borders does important work all around the world, and the Department of Defence deeply regrets the loss of innocent lives that resulted from this tragic event".¹⁰³

On October 8, Doctors Without Borders said that 33 people are still missing days after the U.S. airstrike on the international medical charity's hospital in Kunduz, Afghanistan killed 22 others. The medical group, known by its French acronym MSF, said nine of the unaccounted for are patients and 24 staff members.¹⁰⁴ In the meantime, Pentagon Press Secretary Peter Cook in a statement said on October 10 that "The Department of Defence believes it is important to address the consequences of the tragic incident at the Doctors Without Borders hospital in Kunduz, Afghanistan. Addressing elite Revolutionary Guard commanders in Tehran on October 7, Iran's top leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, has banned direct talks with the United States because of what he described as "countless harm" to Iran's interests. Although he supported the last 18 months of negotiations, Khamenei has not publicly endorsed Tehran's historic nuclear agreement with the United States, France, Britain, China, Russia and Germany that settled a standoff of more than a decade. Hardliners have accused the administration of President Hassan Rouhani of seeking a resumption of ties with Washington.¹⁰⁶

Ted Cruz, Texas senator and the Republican presidential contender said in an address on October 5 that the Obama administration's plan to accept about 10,000 Syrian refugees is "nothing short of crazy." Cruz told a Michigan crowd he thinks a "significant number" of refugees entering Europe are terrorists from the so-called Islamic State (IS) group. He said it would be the "height of foolishness" to allow "Syrian Muslims" into the country.¹⁰⁷

The Associated Press reported on October 7 that Eastern European gangs have tried to sell radioactive materials to Middle Eastern extremists, including IS. Four attempted sales by gangs with suspected Russian connections have been thwarted in the past five years by authorities in the eastern European country of Moldova working with the FBI. The Associated Press reports that the last attempt was in February 2015, when a smuggler in the Moldovan capital, Chisinau, offered a large cache of deadly cesium and was specifically looking for a buyer from IS.¹⁰⁸

On October 9, Pentagon Press Secretary Peter Cook in a statement said that building on the past progress in fighting against the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL), "Secretary of Defence Ash Carter is now directing the Department of Defence to provide equipment packages and weapons to a select group of vetted leaders and their units so that over time they can make a concerted push into territory still controlled by ISIL." ¹⁰⁹ Pentagon Press Statement on Syria, DoD News, October 9, 2015 at <http://www.defense.gov/News/News-Releases/News-Release-View/Article/622610/statement-on-syria>

On October 7, Russia, which has been carrying out airstrikes in Syria, said it has used four warships in the Caspian Sea to launch rockets at Islamic State (IS) targets in the war-torn country. Russian Defence Minister Sergei Shoigu told President Vladimir Putin that the vessels fired 26 cruise missiles at 11 IS targets that he said were destroyed. He said there were no civilian casualties. Meanwhile, U.S. Defence Secretary Ash Carter told reporters in Rome that the United States, which has conducted thousands of airstrikes against the IS group in Syria and Iraq, has not agreed to cooperate with Russia in the fight against the extremists.¹¹⁰ Mark Toner, a State Department spokesman, said on October 6 that the U.S. would not want to see Russia transfer its “formula” in Syria to Iraq. Toner said U.S. officials would like to see Russia play a “constructive” role in fighting Islamic State targets in Syria. “To a large extent, we have not seen that, thus far,” he added. He said Russia has only “ratcheted up tensions” with its airstrikes against moderate opposition forces in Syria. “We don’t want to see that same formula transferred to Iraq,” Toner said.¹¹¹

Many U.S. lawmakers reacted cautiously to the successful conclusion of negotiations to forge the world’s biggest trading bloc. The Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) would reduce trade barriers among 12 Pacific Rim nations that account for 40 percent of global economic output. Republican Senator John McCain stood out among lawmakers by immediately and enthusiastically endorsing the pact. McCain said in a statement that “The TPP offers a historic opportunity to reduce trade barriers, open new markets, promote made in America exports, and keep American companies competitive in one of the most economically vibrant and fastest-growing regions in the world”.¹¹² However, Hillary Clinton, U.S. Democratic presidential candidate, said on October 7 that she did not support the new TPP, a huge trade deal she advocated when she was secretary of state. Clinton said the TPP would do too little to protect U.S. workers from the impact of currency manipulation by other nations, and too much to help major pharmaceutical companies at the expense of patients.¹¹³

As per news reports, the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP), the most expansive trade agreement in history, is being hailed among its dozen Asian member governments for unifying a market encompassing 40 percent of the global economy with $30 trillion total output. But the pact’s implementation is not yet assured. Already there is considerable opposition expressed by some powerful U.S. senators, including those in President Barack Obama’s Democratic Party. Former secretary of state and now Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton is among those opposing the TPP. If all of the participating countries do not ratify it within two

- Indian parliamentarians visit US for track-two dialogue; US says India-US relationship has grown enormously under Modi government; India has joined the trilateral “dialogue” with US and Japan; India, US and Japan getting ready for naval Exercise Malabar 2015.

A group of Indian parliamentarians visit US for track-two dialogue with the American officials, lawmakers, policy experts and industry members for a deeper understanding of India-US relations aimed at taking it to 'strategic plus' level. The agenda also includes meetings at the World Bank and United Nations headquarters, given India's growing prominence at multilateral fora. The group is led by Baijayant "Jay" Panda (Biju Janata Dal) Chair, the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI)'s India-US Forum of Parliamentarians. The multi-party delegation includes Jyotiraditya Scindia (Congress), K Kavitha (Telangana Rashtra Samithi), Arpita Ghosh (Trinamool Congress) and Gaurav Gogoi (Congress). Panda said in Washington that "The India-US relationship has unprecedented momentum today...The focus of this delegation is to identify ways to strengthen relations across a range of economic and political areas."¹¹⁵

On October 9, the US stated that since Prime Minister Narendra Modi came to power, India-US relationship has grown enormously, especially on security and diplomatic fronts. The US is now hopeful that this relationship will only become more productive in the coming years. The US State Department Spokesman, John Kirby, said, "There's been enormous progress in US-India relations, and certainly since Prime Minister Modi came into office". Kirby added, "The relationship continues to deepen and grow on the security front and certainly diplomatically, and we look forward to that relationship continuing to grow and to deepen and to become more productive".¹¹⁶

Indian External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj joined her US and Japanese counterparts, John Kerry and Fumio Kishida respectively, at last week's inaugural US-Japan-India Trilateral Ministerial Dialogue. The meeting was held in New York September 29 on the side-lines of the United Nations General Assembly. India's participation in this new trilateral forum along with the US and its most important Asian-Pacific ally marks a new benchmark in India's integration into the US "Pivot to Asia"—Washington's drive to militarily-strategically isolate and encircle China.¹¹⁷ Meanwhile, amidst the growing tension in South China Sea (SCS), India, the US and Japan are getting ready for naval Exercise Malabar 2015. Confrontation is brewing in the South China Sea, with the Financial Times reporting that the United States Navy (USN) is about to challenge China's construction of "artificial islands" in disputed waters. By sailing warships next week through a 12-nautical mile zone around these islands, the USN will explicitly reject China's claim.¹¹⁸

National

(October 5-11, 2015)

- Indigenously built Torpedo Launch and Recovery Vessel INS Astradharini commissioned into the Indian Navy; Union Cabinet approves the construction of a National War Memorial and a National War Museum.

An indigenously built Torpedo Launch and Recovery Vessel (TLRV), INS Astradharini has been commissioned on October 6, 2015. The design of the Astradharini is a collaborative effort of NSTL (a naval systems laboratory of DRDO), M/s Shoft Shipyard and IIT Kharagpur and has a unique design of a catamaran hull form that significantly reduces its power requirement and is built with indigenous steel. The vessel has a length of 50 m. It is capable to do speeds up to 15 Knots. It can operate at high sea states and has a large deck area with Torpedo Launchers for deploying and recovering various kinds of torpedos during the trials. The ship also has modern power generation and distribution, navigation and communication systems. The unique hull form of the ship demonstrates the country's ship design and shipbuilding capabilities. Significantly, 95 per cent of the ship's systems are of indigenous design in sync with Make in India philosophy. It is an advanced replacement for Astravahini which was decommissioned on July 17, 2015.¹¹⁹

- Russian warships in the Caspian Sea fire cruise missiles on a wide range of targets in Syria; Serbia expected to double defence industry exports in 2015.

Reports say that Russian warships in the Caspian Sea have fired 26 Kalibr-NK cruise missiles, hitting a wide range of targets in Syria. The Russian Ministry of Defence released videos showing the missile launch. The targets of the missile strike by the Caspian flotilla were located in eastern and northwestern Syria. Using cruise missiles allowed Russia to avoid deploying aircraft in areas where US fighter jets are known to fly. The strike required prior military co-ordination with both Iran and Iraq, whose airspace the missiles transited to reach Syria. Though, the missile strike cost is estimated USD50 million, it represented an effective show of strength by Russia to impose its decisive influence over the proxy war in Syria.¹²¹

Meanwhile, according to reports, Serbia is expected to double defence industry exports to USD750 million this year. The rise will be the first such significant increase in 15 years. Serbia's Zastava Arms currently has an order book of USD102 million, with the company expecting an RSD400 million (USD3.7 million) profit in 2015 after many years of losses. However, the government has also had to step in to support Zastava. The company's management agreed to an investment by the state in new equipment valued at EUR4 million (USD4.5 million).¹²²

In a written reply to a question by National Conference legislator Mian Altaf Ahmad, J&K Chief Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed on October 5 informed the state assembly that 69 people including 35 security personnel were killed and 199 injured in militancy-related incidents and Pakistani firing in the state this year.
