Bangladesh

(January 5–11, 2015)

- Government bars BNP to hold rally on January 5; Violent clashes erupt over first anniversary of January 5 elections; British High Commissioner in Dhaka calls for all party dialogue; Amit Shah denies having any phone conversation with Zia; The US House Committee on Foreign Affairs denies to have commented on Bangladesh politics; NIA arrests JBM operative.

BNP chief Khaleda Zia called an indefinite, countrywide blockade from January 6, protesting her confinement in her Gulshan office and the locking of the party office by police. Allegedly, police also used pepper spray to disperse the party leaders and activists waiting inside the gate. Several journalists were injured in the police action. BNP leaders said Khaleda wanted to go to the party's central office at Nayapaltan, where leaders were asked to gather for holding a planned rally to denounce the January 5 one-sided parliamentary election in 2014. After police barred her from coming out Zia called the blockade of roads, railways and waterways across the country. The ruling Awami League and its various front organisations, however, brought out processions and held rallies and human chains in many parts of the city, defying an indefinite police ban on political activities, to celebrate January 5 as the "Victory Day for Democracy." But the government took every possible measure to thwart the BNP to hold any rally in Dhaka.¹

Reportedly, violent clashes across the country left at least four people dead and over 300 injured with growing tension over the first anniversary of the controversial January-5 parliamentary polls.²

British High Commissioner in Dhaka Robert Gibson called for a dialogue among all the stakeholders to check violence and destructions. He said he was not talking about a dialogue only between two major political parties—BNP and Awami League—but among all the stakeholders including the civil society representatives. He made the call when his attention was drawn at a function in Dhaka on January 8 about political violence that killed and injured people over the last few days.³

According to Bangladesh media report, Bharatiya Janata Party President Amit Shah phoned BNP Chairperson Khaleda Zia to enquire about her health on January 7.⁴ Amit Shah however, has denied having any phone conversation with BNP Chairperson Khaleda Zia.⁵

The US House Committee on Foreign Affairs has trashed media reports that claimed the committee along with five members of the US Congress had condemned the Bangladesh government's action on the media and politicians. Neither the committee nor the Congress members issued any such statement on Bangladesh politics, the House body said on January 8, referring to reports run by a section of newspapers in Bangladesh and the UK edition of International Business Times.⁶

India's National Investigation Agency (NIA) arrested Rezaul Karim, an alleged operative of banned terror outfit Jamaat-ul Mujahideen Bangladesh (JMB), in connection with the Burdwan blast case on January 10. Karim, who had a bounty on his head, was arrested from Jharkhand where he had been hiding since the blast on October 2. According to an NIA statement, he was an active member of the JMB and was "engaged in manufacturing and transporting bombs to different locations". So far, 12 people have been arrested in this connection.⁷

Sri Lanka

(January 5–11, 2015)

- Maithripala Sirisena takes oaths as the sixth President of Sri Lanka; World leaders congratulate Sirisena; "Army chief under pressure to deploy force": Chief spokesman for the new president; Lanka tourist arrivals exceed 1.5 million in 2014.

Election Commissioner Mahinda Deshapriya officially declared Maithripala Sirisena as the new President of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka on January 9. Sirisena obtained a majority of 51.28 per cent votes in the Presidential elections held on January 8.⁸ Maithripala Sirisena took oaths as the sixth President of Sri Lanka on January 9 in front of Justice K. Sripavan and not Chief Justice Mohan Peiris. United National Party (UNP) leader Ranil Wickremesinghe also took oaths as the Prime Minister on the same day.⁹

World leaders including US President Barack Obama, Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi, British Prime Minister David Cameron, Australian Prime Minister Tony Abbott, Singapore President Tony Tan, Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong, UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, Commonwealth Secretary-General Kamalesh Sharma congratulated Sri Lanka's new president on his election win.¹⁰

Mahinda Rajapaksa tried to persuade the army chief to deploy troops when it became clear he had lost Sri Lanka's election, according to Rajitha Senaratne, the chief spokesman for the new president Sirisena. "The army chief was under pressure to deploy but he did not. He declined to do anything illegal," Senaratne told reporters in Colombo.¹¹

Statistics released by Sri Lanka Tourism Development Authority (SLTDA) showed that Sri Lanka had met its tourist arrival target of 1.5 million for the year 2014. According to SLTDA figures, Sri Lanka's tourist arrivals rose 16.1 percent in December 2014 compared to the same period in 2013 with the arrival of 178,672 tourists compared to the 153,918 arrived in December 2013. For the year a total of 1,527,153 tourists arrived in the island recording a 19.8 percent increase from the 1,274,593 came during 2013.¹²

Maldives

(January 5–11, 2015)

- Sri Lanka thanks Maldives for decision to hand over prisoners; President Gayoom congratulates Sirisena; Maldivian representatives meet Ranil Wicremesinghe; President appoints High Commissioner to India, Non-Resident Ambassador to UAE; Tourism Ministry targets 1.4 million tourists for 2015.

The Ministry of External Affairs of Sri Lanka has said that the Sri Lankan government was 'most appreciative' of the decision by President Abdulla Yameen Abdul Gayoom, to hand over all Sri Lankan prisoners currently held in the Maldives to the Sri Lankan government. In a statement issued on January 7, the Sri Lankan External Affairs Ministry said that this gesture was in response to a request made on a humanitarian basis by former Sri Lankan President Mahinda Rajapaksa during a recent conversation with the President Yameen.¹³

President Abdulla Yameen Abdul Gayoom sent a congratulatory message to the President-elect of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka, Maithiripala Sirisena, following his victory in the Presidential election.¹⁴ President Abdulla Yameen Abdul Gayoom also called up the President of Sri Lanka, H.E. Maithiripala Sirisena, on January 10 following his assumption of office. President Yameen and President Sirisena spoke on the importance of further strengthening the relations between the Maldives and Sri Lanka, noting the close bilateral relations between the two countries. The President of Sri Lanka said that the Maldives was one of the closest friends of Sri Lanka, and invited President Yameen to make an official visit at his earliest convenience. He also expressed his gratitude to President Yameen for the good wishes. President Sirisena assured President Yameen that he would give high priority to build on the existing relations between the two countries, during his tenure as President. Speaking in this regard, President Sirisena said that the good relations between the two countries must be maintained regardless of the administration in power.¹⁵

Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dunya Maumoon and Minister at the President's Office, Mohamed Hussain Shareef met with the new Prime Minister of Sri Lanka, Ranil Wickremesinghe, as representatives of the Government of Maldives. At the meeting, the Sri Lankan Prime Minister expressed his firm commitment to promote Maldives-Sri Lanka ties, and assured of his continued support for Maldives at international forums. Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe also agreed to make an official visit to the Maldives at an early mutually convenient time. At the meeting, discussions were held on the importance of strengthening people-to-people relations between the Maldives and Sri Lanka. The Prime Minister also confirmed that health and education would be key areas of cooperation between the two countries. Further, he invited President Yameen to be the first Head of State to visit Sri Lanka under the new administration.¹⁶ President Sirisena also met with the Maldivian delegation in Sri Lanka. The delegates congratulated the new Sri Lankan President on behalf of the President and Government of Maldives. Discussions at the meeting were held on ways to further strengthen the existing relations between the two countries. At the meeting, the Sri Lankan President noted that this year marked the 50th anniversary of the Maldives' independence, as well as the 50th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the Maldives and Sri Lanka. He expressed his gratitude to the Maldivian delegation for being among the first foreign dignitaries to welcome the new Sri Lankan Government.¹⁷

Veteran Singaporean diplomat Bilahari Kausikan, speaking at Institute of Southeast Asian Studies' (ISEAS) Regional Outlook Forum²⁹ in Singapore, said that ASEAN would face complex security challenges when USA and China were groping for a new challenge³⁰. In his 45 minute keynote speech, he criticized US and China actions that perpetrated uncertainty for ASEAN and he argued that it would test ASEAN policies to cope with the challenges. He argued that ASEAN members were pulled in different directions. He added, "Singapore, for example, has on occasion been accused by American friends of being too close to China and by Chinese friends of being too close to America³¹," he said. "Japanese friends have been discreet in keeping their thoughts to themselves³²." He also said that ASEAN should not take sides in the interests of major powers. He commented, "The US, China and Japan are all substantial powers. All of them will remain substantial for the foreseeable future, and none of them can be ignored³³."

Spokesperson of Transportation Ministry of Indonesia released a statement last week and said that aviation disasters in 2014, like crash of Indonesia Air Asia Flight QZ8501³⁴ would not deter Southeast Asian nations from embracing the ASEAN Open Skies Policy that came into effect from January 1³⁵. ASEAN Open Skies Policy is currently expected to boost connectivity by the end of this year across the region and people's movement in the region, which in turn would spur economic growth³⁶.

The Defence Department's top acquisitions official January 7 released a new version of the acquisitions corps' guiding document: Department of Defence Instruction 5000.02, Operation of the Defence Acquisition System. The updated instruction cancels the interim version that was implemented November 25, 2013, Frank Kendall, undersecretary of defence for acquisition, technology and logistics, said in a memorandum accompanying the release. More than ever, the new instruction emphasizes that acquisitions programs should be tailored to the product being acquired, Kendall wrote.⁶⁰

Two operational squadrons of U.S. Air Force F-35 Lightning II joint strike fighter jets will be permanently stationed at the Royal Air Force Lakenheath facility in the United Kingdom starting in 2020, Defence Department officials announced on January 8. The announcement was made at the same time officials released the department's plans for European Infrastructure Consolidation, a two-year effort designed to ensure long-term efficiency and effectiveness of the U.S. presence in Europe.⁶¹

The new Republican-led U.S. Senate is wasting no time pressing for construction of a controversial oil pipeline from Canada. The chamber's Energy Committee approved the project 13-9, moving Congress one step closer to a confrontation with President Barack Obama, who has threatened a veto. Keystone XL would expand existing North American pipelines to transport crude oil from Alberta, Canada to U.S. Gulf states. The Obama administration has yet to finalize a six-year review of the proposal, but the president has expressed strong doubts about the project. If constructed, the pipeline's direct impact on the U.S. economy and global petroleum supplies is expected to be modest. The issue, however, has provoked a fight involving America's energy sector and environmentalists and their allies in Congress.⁶² Earlier the White House warned the new Republican-controlled Congress Tuesday that President Barack Obama will veto pending legislation calling for construction of a controversial oil pipeline running from Canada through the central part of the United States.⁶³

Fewer Americans applied for unemployment assistance last week, the latest favourable sign from the growing U.S. economy. The government says as the calendar turned into the new year, 294,000 workers made first-time claims for jobless benefits, 4,000 fewer than the week before. The applications for unemployment compensation have stayed steady at below 300,000 a week since September, an indication employers are laying off fewer workers and hiring more. After uneven U.S. economic advances during much of his six years in office, President Barack Obama has been touting the recent robust growth of the world's largest economy.⁶⁵

The Defence Department on January 8 released a breakdown of the numbers of DoD personnel involved in the battle to stop the spread of Ebola. The efforts, led by the U.S. Agency for International Development, involve 2,367 DoD personnel, said Pentagon spokesman Army Col. Steve Warren. Most of those personnel — 2,174 — are based in Monrovia, Liberia's capital city. The remaining 193 personnel are Marine Corps members and port operations personnel operating in Dakar, Senegal. U.S. military personnel are not involved in treating patients with Ebola, defense officials have said. Their role in the fight is to provide logistical support and training for health care workers, to test medical samples and to construct Ebola treatment units.⁶⁶

The new 114th Congress is barely under way, but already Democratic and Republican leaders in the House of Representatives appear to be bracing for a new confrontation over the issue of immigration reform and deportations. U.S. President Barack Obama says 2014 was a “breakthrough year” for America and he has the “evidence to back that up.” The president said in his weekly address Saturday that 2014 was the strongest year for job growth since the 1990s, with unemployment falling faster than it has in three decades. Obama said “thanks to the Affordable Care Act” about 10 million Americans obtained health insurance last year. In December alone, Obama said, American businesses created 240,000 jobs and the unemployment rate fell to 5.6 percent.⁷⁰

Unless Congress changes the Budget Control Act, which now requires a return to sequestration-level spending cuts in 2016, the military will need to change its strategy, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said in an interview broadcast today. In an appearance on “Fox News Sunday With Chris Wallace,” Army Gen. Martin E. Dempsey said the Army is drawing down from 570,000 soldiers to 450,000, but he noted that a Pentagon analysis shows sequestration would drive that number to 420,000, and even lower under some circumstances. Sequestration would leave the military “far less able to do the things that we think the country needs us to do,” Dempsey said. Meanwhile, the United States continues to face threats from both state actors and nonstate actors, the chairman said.⁷¹

The United States has begun training Iraqi army recruits, a central part of the strategy by the U.S.-led coalition that is working with the Iraqi government to retake territory and ultimately defeat Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) terrorists in the country. Pentagon spokesman Army Col. Steve Warren told reporters on January 5 that six weeks of training began on December 27 for four battalions of Iraqi security forces at a base in Taji, north of Baghdad. Training began at Asad Air Base in Anbar province for members of the Iraqi 7th Division several days earlier.⁷⁴

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff hosted the Israel Defence Forces chief of the General Staff at the Pentagon on January 8 for talks on regional security and bilateral cooperation. U.S. Army Gen. Martin E. Dempsey and Israeli Lt. Gen. Benjamin Gantz met with reporters today after more than an hour of talks. Indonesia and the United States have signed an action plan to expand military cooperation and improve Indonesia's defence readiness. The signing ceremony at the Ministry of Defence in Jakarta on January 7 was witnessed by the ministry's Secretary General, Lt. Gen. Ediwan Prabowo, and U.S. Deputy Ambassador Kristen Bauer. India and the US are set to boost bilateral ties in cyber security and counter-terrorism during President Barack Obama's visit this month, as the two countries prepare to put in place a mechanism for exchanging terrorist watch lists, officials told Hindustan Times on January 6. Indian officials said the two countries are already on way to finalising protocols to be followed in the exchange of terrorist watch lists that has become an effective counter-terrorism measure for the US government. Both countries will also look to shore up existing counter-terrorism cooperation in international forums like the United Nations and Global Counter-terrorism Forum. Another focus area is strengthening live-time sharing of information and data.⁸⁵

Ahead of President Barack Obama's trip to India, a top US energy expert has said the upcoming visit is a "golden opportunity" for the two nations to join hands in the energy sector and address the key issue of climate change. Obama is scheduled to visit India to attend the annual Republic Day celebrations on January 26 as its Chief Guest at the invitation of the Prime Minister Narendra Modi. Energy is likely to be a major part of the discussion between the two leaders, said Raymond

India is looking to boost energy ties with the United States during President Barack Obama's visit to New Delhi as the chief guest for Republic Day celebrations. Ahead of the visit, the ministry of external affairs (MEA) has asked the petroleum ministry to come up with ideas for cooperation in the oil and gas sector, Financial Express reported. In their second bilateral meeting on January 25, Obama and Prime Minister Narendra Modi will discuss a range of priority issues, including cooperation in the oil and gas sector. The specific elements of engagement between India and the US would include allowing LNG exports from the US to India and technological cooperation in the field of oil and natural gas.⁸⁷

Former Indian and US diplomats on January 10 held business as a force to drive the two economies, a signal US President Barack Obama must send out in his bilateral meeting with Prime Minister Narendra Modi later this month. While a rising China, terrorism and cyber warfare were the issues that dotted their bilateral concerns, there was a strong consensus among American panellists that the rise of India as a global power is in the interest of their country, and Obama must extend partnership in order to make India self-reliant in trade and business. Drawing upon the positive side of India-US relationship, Nicholas Burns, the former Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs under Bush administration from 2005 to 2008, said, "Trade and services between the two countries have quadrupled in the last decade. But we are also victims of extreme terrorism, and homeland security is critical to both of us. A rising China is also a common concern that we must focus on."⁸⁸

Secretary of State John Kerry met with Prime Minister Narendra Modi on January 11 to promote economic ties with India and set the stage for President Obama's visit later this month. Mr. Obama is planning to attend India's Republic Day celebrations on Jan. 26. It is the first time that an American president has been invited to the event as the nation's chief guest. Negotiations between India and the United States on issues like climate change, an agreement on civilian nuclear plants, military purchases, and investment and manufacturing rules have quickened in recent weeks because of Mr. Obama's coming visit. But it remains to be seen whether the president's trip will be mainly symbolic or if it will lead to significant agreements. During his presentation to the investment conference, Mr. Kerry underscored that the United States wanted to increase trade with India to $500 billion a year, a significant leap from $97 billion in 2013. "We can do more together, and we must do more together, and we have to do it faster," Mr. Kerry said.⁸⁹

Lauding Prime Minister Narendra Modi's, US secretary of state John Kerry said the 'Make in India' project can serve not just India but the entire planet if it taps into sustainable energy resources. Kerry was speaking at the Vibrant Gujarat Global Summit (VGGGS), a brainchild of Modi. The US is one of eight partner countries of the three-day summit this time. On bilateral relations, Kerry said India-US trade has grown five-fold since 2000 and that investments too have grown. "We can do more together, we must do more and we need to do it much faster. With the prime minister we intend to take bilateral trade to grow by five-fold in next five years," he said.⁹⁰

Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vigorous foreign policy in the months since he took office has surprised observers. This month, US President Barack Obama will travel to New Delhi as Modi's special guest at events commemorating Republic Day, India's national holiday - just three months after the two leaders held substantive talks in Washington, DC. The visit should thus be regarded as a clear signal of Obama's desire, no less than Modi's, to strengthen US-India relations. Three issues stand out - Trade, terrorism, China -- seen as key discussion points during Obama trip.⁹¹

There could be progress on U.S.-India civil nuclear cooperation, solar power and climate change when U.S. President Barack Obama visits India in two weeks, U.S. officials said on January 11. While stressing there were no guarantees that some of the most vexing economic issues between India and the United States would be resolved, the officials said some agreements were conceivable. Obama's visit to India and trips by Kerry and other U.S. senior officials aim to woo India as a strategic partner and to win greater access to the vast Indian market of 1.2 billion people for U.S. companies. U.S. officials have long argued that Indian policies are a barrier to U.S. investment and trade, including its tariff and customs practices and its requirements that foreign companies in some industries ensure a given percentage of local content.⁹²

In a major success to DRDO, an advance Electronic Warfare suite (EW suite) developed by Defence Avionics Research Establishment (DARE), a DRDO laboratory, flew for the first time on board the "Tejas-PV1 Light Combat Aircraft" on January 10 at Bengaluru. In addition to the Radar Warner, the EW suite is also equipped with jammer. The equipment was successfully detecting Radar signals operating in and around the flight path. This warfare suite adds an important capability to our LCA.⁹³

Meanwhile, in a change of strategy by the Indian army, Indian troops have been ordered not to react to cross-border shelling or firing from Pakistan immediately but wait for targets to show along the Line of Control (LOC). This was revealed by Lt General Subrata Saha, GOC of the Srinagar-based 15Corps. The General said, "After all, we have no plans to fight a war so it's no use aimlessly shelling or firing across the LOC. The troops simply stay put while the firing continues and then maintain strict vigil through night-vision equipment if necessary. Whenever a target presents itself, it is neutralized. This has yielded good results. After all, it's better to strike where it hurts."⁹⁴

- France to boost Army's presence in the capital following terror attack; Turkey to order four more F-35 fighter jets and five more Chinook heavy transport helicopters.

Reports say that the France is to deploy another 600 troops to the capital Paris and the immediate region to boost security following the recent killing of 10 journalists and two police officers. As set out in the France's official white paper on defence and national security, the highest priority of the armed forces is to protect domestic integrity, ahead of deployment in foreign operations. The troops will support patrols by local police and paramilitary gendarmerie forces, which are protecting media offices, public buildings, places of worship and public transport. The civil police authorities and the Paris military governor have joint command of the soldiers once they are in the capital under the mission of observation and surveillance.⁹⁵

Meanwhile, according to reports, Turkey's top procurement panel decided on January 7 to order four more F-35 fighter jets and five more CH-47F Chinook heavy transport helicopters. Turkey's procurement agency, the Under secretariat for Defence Industries (SSM), said in a press release that the government decided to order four more F-35s from the multinational Joint Strike Fighter (JSF) consortium, in which Turkey is a member. The move increases Turkey's official orders to six. Turkey plans eventually to buy 100 F-35s. SSM also said that the Defence Industry Executive Committee, the top panel for procurement also decided to place an order for five CH-47F Chinook

Jammu & Kashmir

(January 5–11, 2015)

- Pak shelling kills BSF jawan, thousands flee homes; Governor's rule imposed in J & K; Proposed rehabilitation of West Pakistan refugees raises furore in valley.

A BSF trooper identified as Devinder Singh of the 9th battalion was killed in mortar shelling by Pakistan Rangers on Khawada post on the international border in Samba district of Jammu and Kashmir on January 5. Pakistan also resorted to unprovoked shelling at three places in Ramgarh sector as well as in Samba district. The BSF retaliated using same calibre weapons. Tension gripped areas close to the international border in Samba, Kathua and Jammu districts, as mortars fired by Pakistan landed as close as three km to the strategic Pathankot-Jammu national highway. The shelling by Pakistan on January 5 came after a lull of two days.⁹⁷ Pakistan fired mortar shells and gunshots at over 60 villages and scores of forward posts in Kathua and Samba districts in Jammu and Kashmir in continuing ceasefire violations. India had tried handing over a protest note regarding the ceasefire violation, but Pakistan allegedly refused to accept it. Nearly 10,000 people have fled from the border areas with 7,500 taking shelter in camps set up by the government in safer areas in Kathua and Samba districts since the latest round of ceasefire violations by Pakistan started on New Year Eve, officials said.⁹⁸ Meanwhile, BSF has foiled yet another bid by Pakistan-based militants to infiltrate into Jammu and Kashmir under the cover of firing from across the border and thick fog in Kathua district of Jammu and Kashmir. "There was movement of a group of militants along international border in Pallia area in Chilyari-khora forward belt in Kathua district last night," a senior BSF officer said. This is the fifth infiltration attempt in a week by militants under the cover of firing by Pakistani troops and thick blanket of fog along the international border.⁹⁹

In the wake of efforts at government formation remaining unsuccessful and Omar Abdullah triggering a crisis by declining to continue as the caretaker chief minister, Governor's rule was imposed in the state on December 9. The proclamation placing the state under governor's rule was issued under Section 92 of the Constitution of J&K.¹⁰⁰

The mainstream political parties as well as separatists have upped the ante against the reported inclination of Government of India (GoI's) plans to settle West Pakistan refugees in Jammu and Kashmir. Terming the recommendation of the JPC to settle the refugees permanently in J&K as anti-state, NC general secretary and former minister Ali Muhammad Sagar on January 10 said that these are unacceptable. Earlier, separatist leader Syed Ali Geelani had threatened to launch an agitation if the Centre granted citizenship and voting rights to West Pakistan refugees living mainly in the border areas of Jammu. He also termed the reported move as an attack on the special status of Jammu and Kashmir and a conspiracy to change its demography. However, the refugees claim that many of them lived in Pakistan-occupied Kashmir before they were uprooted by the 1947-48, 1965 and 1971 wars between India and Pakistan. To grant them citizenship and voting rights in the State Assembly elections, apart from monetary and other benefits, was one of the main election planks of the Bharatiya Janata Party. Various representative bodies of these refugees too have been struggling for their "rights" for decades but would always be denied on the plea that since they were not bona fide citizens of the state, the law does not permit it.¹⁰¹

- Nine NDFB (Songbijit) members arrested in connection with Assam violence; BSF and BGB to jointly patrol Indo-Bangla border in Tripura.

In connection with the December 23 terror attacks on Adivasi villages in Kokrajhar and Sonitpur districts of Assam, security forces have so far apprehended nine cadres of National Democratic Front of Boroland (Songbijit). The terror attacks by militants of NDFB (Songbijit) on Adivasi villages and subsequent retaliatory attacks on Bodo villages by miscreants among the Adivasis and the police firing on protestors claimed 81 lives (Adivasi-66, Bodo-13, others-2) and displaced over 2.70 lakh people, which had both the Bodos and the Adivasis. Assam State Disaster Management Authorities stated that as on January 6, 1, 29,828 inmates were taking shelter in 77 relief camps in the four affected districts.¹⁰²

by BSF and BGB in Tripura to check cross-border movement of Indian insurgents. A joint statement signed by both the sides stated that the Indian side raised issues about the presence of banned National Liberation Front of Tripura (NLFT) in Chittagong Hill Tracts of the neighbouring country and about NLFT engaged in kidnapping and extortions in the bordering areas in India side. Both sides then agreed for joint patrolling by BSF and BGB and Bangladesh security would swung into action if insurgents were found to be using their soil. The Bangladesh side informed that instructions have been given to launch operation against Indian insurgents using the soil of Bangladesh for carrying out “subversive” activities in India. They also said that a decision to set up five more border outposts in the Chittagong Hill Tract areas bordering Dhalai district of Tripura has been taken for better vigil and stop cross-border movement of insurgents. Both sides also decided to share information about dual citizenship of people and take necessary action against them.¹⁰³

- Kerala Police to get better logistics support to fight Maoist threat; Four armed Maoist cadres surrender in Malkangiri, Odisha.

As part of equipping the Kerala state police to face Maoist threats, the Ministry of Home is planning to extend them superior logistic support and special training. Minister for Home Ramesh Chennithala discussed the action plans and strategies in detail at a high-level meeting, which was attended by top police officers, including the State Police Chief at Kozhikhode on January 9. Other than the specially trained Thunderbolt squad, the local police would be given more support in terms of State funding, logistics, and training. The police stations in North Kerala would be given special focus as three newly constituted wings of the Maoist movement had its focus on the region.¹⁰⁴ Also, in a bid to fight the Maoist menace, tribes people will be recruited directly to the police force, said Ramesh Chennithala. The minister said the police would be entrusted with overseeing the implementation of development projects in tribal areas. Urging the media not to glorify Maoists, he said a meeting of news editors would be held soon.¹⁰⁵

Four armed Maoist cadres, including three women, surrendered in Malkangiri district of Odisha on January 10. - Pakistan rejects India's charges on 'Terror Boat'; Three suspected IM operatives arrested in connection with Bangalore blast; Punjab deputy CM seeks release of terrorists.

Union Defence Minister Manohar Parrikar on January 5 reiterated that all "circumstantial evidence" surrounding the Pakistani fishing boat pointed to a terror link and that its occupants were in touch with Pakistan maritime security agencies and the army.¹⁰⁷ Contradicting the claims, the investigators in Karachi have identified the fishing boat destroyed on New Year's Eve as a vessel allegedly linked to a drug mafia based in Pakistan. According to sources, the 25-foot vessel, named Qalandar, was captained by Yaqboob Baloch, a resident of the gang war-torn Lyari town in Karachi. The boat often carried contraband for the Balochistan-based drug cartel of Mir Yakub Bizenjo, a fugitive named by the US in 2009 as a leading player in the trans-border trade of narcotics. Few details were immediately available on the crew, but one police source said the men are thought to have worked for multiple criminal groups, running alcohol, diesel and drugs allegedly from and to ports from Dubai to Karachi.¹⁰⁸ The Pakistani boat episode has exposed the fault lines in the country's intelligence set-up, with the premier agency Intelligence Bureau expressing unhappiness over being kept out of the loop. The issue of intelligence sharing has come up amid recommendations by some agencies for a central anti-terror mechanism for more coordinated action.¹⁰⁹

In a joint operation by the Central Crime Branch (CCB) and state internal security division, three suspected Indian Mujahideen (IM) operatives were arrested and a large cache of bomb making materials and communication devices were seized. These arrests were made in two simultaneous raids in Bengaluru and Bhatkal district of Uttara Karnataka on January 8. City Police Commissioner M.N. Reddi, announcing the arrests, said the module prima facie had no links to the December 28, Church Street blast. However, he added that nothing could be ruled out at this stage, and a further probe was on. Mr. Reddi said police raided a house in Cox Town from where they arrested Syed Ismail Afaq (34) and Saddam Hussein (35), and recovered laptops, mobile phones and incriminating communication equipment. Abdus Subur (24), an MBA student in Bhatkal, was

Punjab Deputy Chief Minister Sukhbir Singh Badal on January 8 sought Union Home Minister Rajnath Singh’s intervention to facilitate the release of more than a dozen Sikh terror convicts serving life terms. However, home ministry sources said the Centre was unlikely to entertain Punjab government’s plea seeking amnesty for the terrorists, five of whom were convicted for the assassination of former Punjab Chief Minister Beant Singh. Among the 13 Sikh terror convicts whose release is being sought by the Punjab government are Lakhwinder Singh, Shamsheer Singh and Gurmeet Singh, lodged in Burail Jail, Chandigarh; Jagtar Singh Hawara, Paramjit Singh Bheora, Davinder Singh Pal Bhullar and Daya Singh Lahoria in Tihar Jail; Waryam Singh in Bareilly jail; Gurmeet Singh Fauji serving life sentence in a Rajasthan jail; Gurdeep Singh Khaira in Gulbarga Jail, Karnataka; Lal Singh Akalgarh lodged in Naba jail and Subeg Singh and Nand Singh serving in Chandigarh jail. The Punjab government’s pitch for the release of Sikh life-term terror convicts comes against the backdrop of former terrorist Gurbax Singh Khalsa’s hunger strike at Ambala since November 4. The SGPC is backing his demand for “permanent release” of 7 Sikh terror convicts handed life sentence.¹¹¹
