In view of the legislative assembly elections to be held in Gilgit Baltistan on June 8, 2015, the election commission is making all necessary arrangements for smooth conduct of polls. The second elections in the region will be held under the auspices of the Pakistan army. The demand to bring in the army to supervise the conduct of polls was first put forward by the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI). Subsequently, the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) also raised similar demand to call in the army for elections. As a result of the demand made by political parties and also based on the reports given by the respective returning officers, the election commission decided to hold the elections under the Pakistan army's supervision, especially in the sensitive constituencies.

On May 8, a tragic incident took place in the Naltar Valley in Gilgit Baltistan where in a helicopter crash the Norwegian Ambassador, Leif H Larsen, Ambassador of Philippines, Domingo D Lucenario Jr, wives of the Malaysian and Indonesian ambassadors and two Pakistan Army Majors were all dead. Ambassador of Indonesia to Pakistan, Burhan Muhammad, who was severely injured in the crash later succumbed to his burn injuries in a hospital. Initial reports suggested the possibility of a terrorist attack. However, the Pakistan army later clarified that the crash occurred due to a technical fault and not otherwise. Taking a lesson from the tragic accident some countries from the west issued advisories to their diplomatic officials posted in Pakistan not to use helicopters etc. from the Pakistan army for travelling purposes.

In response to the ongoing debate on whether Gilgit Baltistan should be made a province of Pakistan, the president of the so called Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK), Sardar Muhammad Yaqoob, noted that this was not possible until the resolution of the Kashmir issue.

“Women banned from taking part in polls in Pakistan's Gilgit Baltistan region”

Khaleej Times, May 1, 2015

ISLAMABAD: The Jirga (religious assembly) in Gilgit Baltistan -- an eight-hour drive from the Pakistan capital -- has banned women from taking part in the coming assembly elections slated for June 8. The Jirga -- a traditional assembly of leaders that takes decisions by consensus and according to the teachings of Islam -- in Darel valley on late April 30 barred the women of the area from contesting and voting in the forthcoming elections as was reported on May 1. All candidates from ruling and opposition parties in the region taking part in the elections have agreed to abide by the Jirga diktat, which stated that women's participation in elections is against the cultural tradition of the area and the religious teachings.

“Situation of women education in GB unsatisfactory”

The Nation, May 3, 2015

After the Dakar World Education Forum held in April 2000, “Education for All” has become the slogan for the education sector worldwide. Pakistan is the signatory of the international accord, universal primary education under the Education for All 2015 Frameworks. In this respect Pakistan has to achieve 100 percent primary school enrolment target till 2015 which seems impossible. Among developing and South Asian countries, Pakistan still remains a country with a momentous number of out of school children. UNICEF reports more than half of the primary school going age children (5-9) remain out of school.

Qaiser Butt, “Déjà vu: Committee on G-B status dubbed a poll ploy”

The Express Tribune, May 4, 2015

ISLAMABAD: Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif at a recent public meeting announced formation of a committee on the constitutional status of Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B). It is the fourth such committee in 35 years. The prime minister held out an assurance that the committee's recommendations will be implemented, but local political parties are sceptical as they believe it is a ploy by the ruling PML-N to win the upcoming elections in the region.

All previous committees had failed to decide the matter. The first committee was constituted by the then prime minister, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, in 1975, the second was formed by military dictator Gen Ziaul Haq during his rule, while the third, a subcommittee of the Senate Human Rights Committee, was unveiled during President Asif Ali Zardari's tenure.

Mustafa Kamal, “Gilgit-Baltistan elections: The nth nail in the coffin of women equality”

The Express Tribune, May 4, 2015

Religion has deepened its roots into Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) once again, where the Legislative assembly elections are set to be held in June, 2015. The first symptom of this religiosity is the allegations against various party leaders for using mosques and imambargahs as launching platforms for their political activities. The second symptom is the current unanimous decision of a so-called jirga (local council) which bars women to vote, as it would put the religious, cultural and social honour of the region at stake according to a report by BBC Urdu.

The Express Tribune, May 6, 2015

GILGIT: A controversial 'decree' barring women in Darel Valley from voting in legislative assembly elections in Gilgit-Baltistan was retracted on May 6. As a result, women will be allowed to vote for the very first time in Darel. The decision was taken on May 6 after Darel AC Samiullah Farooqi assured community elders that separate polling booths for women will be established where only women will be staffed.

“People of Gilgit Baltistan Struggling for their Rights”

ANI, May 5, 2015

The call of the people of Gilgit Baltistan has been going unheard for decades now. The continued denial of political rights by Pakistan in the region is fuelling dissatisfaction by the day. The people of Gilgit Baltistan have realized that Islamabad is taking them for a ride for years. From basic amenities to the citizenship rights, everything has been taken back by the puppet regime from the locals of the region. Even the rich natural resources are being plundered by Pakistan, without paying any royalty to the locals. Gilgit Baltistan was a part of the erstwhile princely state of Jammu and Kashmir. Pakistan, which has illegally occupied it for over six decades, has been ruling it through proxies. While successive Pakistani government have always kept up the sham of championing "self-determination" for the people of Gilgit, it has continuously suppressed their rights denying them basic, constitutional and human rights.

Rajeev Srinivasan, “The existential threat to India posed by China's Pakistan gambit”

First Post, May 4, 2015

The late Samuel P Huntington put forth his seductively simple theory of the “clash of civilisations” some years ago. Although many criticised him, it does appear that there are several mutually antagonistic entities constantly in conflict with each other, shifting alliances and at war overtly or covertly. India has the unfortunate fate of being attacked simultaneously by three of these civilizational entities, while desperately trying to convince itself that it is friends with all of them. The latest manifestation is the Chinese initiative in Pakistan linking Kashgar in Chinese-held Sinkiang to Gwadar in Balochistan, via Pakistani-Occupied Kashmir and Gilgit-Baltistan. The proposed $46 billion project has a number of alarming and sinister implications, almost none of which is good for India.

investments in Pakistan. The federal minister strongly condemned the negative propaganda of the “anti-state” elements, saying that the objective of the negative propaganda was to create hurdles in the Pak-China Economic Corridor. He ruled out any possibility of change in its route. He stated that the nation was agreed to the present route and design of the project. He added that the route of the Pak-China Economic Corridor will pass through Balochistan, Khyber Pakhtunkhawa, Sindh, Punjab, Gilgit Baltistan and Azad Jammu and Kashmir.

Farooq Tariq, "Pakistan: Baba Jan contests election from jail"

May 25, 2015

Baba Jan, a federal committee member of the Awami Workers Party (AWP), is contesting the election for the Gilgit-Baltistan Legislative Assembly seat (Hunza-6) from behind bars. He is in jail serving a life sentence handed down by an anti-terrorism court last year for raising his voice against police brutality and for the rights of Attabad disaster hit people. This is the first time in the history of Gilgit-Baltistan, a disputed territory administered by Pakistan that an election campaign has been run from prison. Elections for the 34-seat rubber-stamp assembly is going to be held on June 8, 2015. The provincial election commission's decision to allow him to contest the poll has surprised many and triggered an enthusiasm among the youth, who consider Baba Jan a symbol of resistance. Baba Jan and his group had boycotted the last general elections in 2009. The Pakistan People's Party won the seat but has lost most of its credibility during its five years in power because of corruption.

Pierre Rousset, “International Solidarity campaign for Baba Jan relaunched”

May 27, 2015

We have been campaigning several years for the release of the ten “climate change prisoners” in Gilgit-Baltistan (north of Pakistan), the most prominent of them being Baba Jan. He was sentenced to life imprisonment, together with Shakrullah Baig, Iftikhar Hussain, Maher Ali, Alleem Ullah, Irfan Ali, Rashid Minhas, Musa Baig, Sher Khan and Sher Ali. As it is often the case in Pakistan, these progressive activists were charged under anti-terrorist laws, while they never promoted any terrorist activities. This very heavy sentence raised a lot of protests in Pakistan and the Appellate Court (Supreme Court) of Gilgit-Baltistan eventually declared them non guilty in one case for which he were given a life sentence. Six of the ten were then released: Alleem Ullah, Irfan Ali, Rashid Minhas, Musa Baig, Sher Khan and Sher Ali.

“The Kotli project”

The News, May 23, 2015

The Chinese firm, building the Karote (Kotli) Hydropower Project, reportedly applied to Nepra for power tariff of over Rs10/kWh. The tariff appears to be very high when compared to the electricity produced by Mangla/Tarbela dams which is not above Rs2/kWh. If it the tariff rate is confirmed then people, already overburdened by the ever-increasing power tariffs, should forget about cheap hydroelectricity in the future. Nepra needs to clarify the report. Incidentally, Karote on the Jhelum River falls in the jurisdiction of AJK and not in Punjab. The AJK government needs to take up this point in the interests of the people of Azad Kashmir.

During the twentieth century areas along the Silk Route witnessed redrawing of boundaries on the basis of modern nation-states.

Shabbir Mir, “Displaced dreams: Uighur families have no place to call home in G-B”

The Express Tribune, May 21, 2015

GILGIT: For over six decades, Uighur families in Gilgit-Baltistan have grappled with an identity crisis for which there appears to be no closure in sight. Running from possible persecution during the Cultural Revolution in 1949 in China, over a 100 families fled from Xinjiang and settled in various parts of Pakistan, including G-B. The exodus continued till 1980 and kept presenting fresh challenges for the migrants and their host communities. Since they had left behind their homes and relatives, Uighur families tried to carve a space for themselves in their new surroundings. With time, they were able to call the region home. The migrants with their colourful traditional dresses were known as Kashgaris, from Kashgar, the administrative centre of Xinjiang. Gradually they made their way into hearts of locals the best way they knew through their stomachs. Manta (dumplings) and laghman (noodles with lamb stew) have now become a staple of the region's diet.

Connect”

Greater Kashmir, May 23 2015

SRINAGAR: Derived from the local words khar and rkil that together means “center of all forts,” Kargil, the name itself denotes importance, is located at an equidistant from all other major places like Baltistan, Srinagar, Leh and Zanskar. Historical account of the region tells us that Kargil (Ladakh) was one of the major centers in the Central Asian trade. Ladakh was very well joined to the fabled “Silk Route”. The region, therefore, would host traders from all the surrounding areas. This remained until 1947. Prior to the partition of the subcontinent, Kargil, Leh and Baltistan constituted a kingdom called “Ladakh Wazarat”. Ever since the ceasefire was drawn up in 1949, the entire region remained a contested area between India and Pakistan. This resulted in fragmenting Ladakh and Baltistan into India and Pakistan respectively. Many families still trace their immediate ancestors on the other side of the Line of Control.

Imtiaz Piracha, “A little out of the way-Azad Kashmir”

Kashmir Monitor, May 7, 2015

I could feel the difference as soon as I drove across the Kohala Bridge over the Jhelum River, and into Azad Kashmir. While the natural beauty of the terrain remained unchanged, the lack of infrastructure and the effects of a clear economic downturn were immediately visible. There were scores of vehicles and colourful umbrellas at the picnic-point on the Pakistani side, while the Azad Kashmir end had only a couple of modest structures that served as stopover facilities for mainly public buses and the occasional explorers like me.
