'Consensus on Kashmir dispute imperative to safeguard supreme National Interest:' Pakistan NSA

Pakistan Observer, November 22, 2021

Pakistan National Security Adviser (NSA), Moeed Yusuf has said that "consensus on Kashmir dispute and national security" is imperative to safeguard supreme national interest. In an interview, he said that the ruling government believes in consensus and dialogue to address all internal and external threats being faced by the country. Moeed Yusuf also expressed serious concern over "massive human rights violations, and atrocities being committed by Indian troops against innocent Kashmiris in Indian illegally occupied Jammu and Kashmir."

'The Kashmir issue'

The Express Tribune, November 23, 2021

India and Pakistan have fought two major wars (1947 and 1965) on the issue of Kashmir. The bilateral relations between the two countries improved for some time but later grew sour following the "alleged terrorist attacks carried out on both soils." Such volatile relations continue even today because of immature political leaders who continue to create an "external enemy" for their selfish interests.

On August 5, 2019, the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) led government in India scrapped Articles 370 and 35-A of the Indian constitution. The amendments not only abrogated "Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir" (IIOJK) special status but also brought changes to "land and ownership rights." At first, Prime Minister (PM) of Pakistan, Imran Khan warned India about a bloodbath that could ensue and asked for the intervention of the international community. But none except for China and Turkey acknowledged the severity of the issue.

Moreover, Imran Khan Government had downgraded the diplomatic relations and suspended bilateral trade with India. The Government also took the matter to the United Nations (UN) and observed August 14 in solidarity with the Kashmiris, Pakistan has tried every possible diplomatic way to support 'IIOJK.' Unfortunately, nothing substantial has been achieved. Now, the government has issued a new political map that includes Jammu and Kashmir and Junagadh as part of Pakistan and has ordered news channels to air it every day before the 9 pm news bulletin for 2 seconds. This seems to be a rather absurd move that will have no significance on the overall cause. The government must first strengthen its economy in order to garner support and fight at the international forum. Pakistan has to prove that it can look after the people of Kashmir. Unless the country is economically strong, no one will pay any heed to the hue and cry of Pakistan on the Kashmir issue.

'Over a million overseas AJK residents to get voting rights'

The Express Tribune, November 24, 2021

The "Azad Jammu and Kashmir" (AJK) government decided to give over one million overseas AJK residents the right to vote in general elections. The decision has been taken in a cabinet meeting chaired by 'AJK' Prime Minister (PM) Sardar Abdul Qayyum Niazi. The cabinet also approved an amendment act to provide financial assistance to widows and orphans under which a special fund will be set up in the region. Moreover, the cabinet also decided to collect the data of Ehsaas programme beneficiaries to ensure a transparent financial assistance system for widows and orphans. While addressing the cabinet, the 'AJK' PM said that all resources will be utilized for the welfare of the people of the region, according to PM of Pakistan Imran Khan's vision. He stressed that PM Imran Khan was taking effective steps for the prosperity and wellbeing of the common people, adding that it was his government's mission to serve the people regardless of their political affiliations. The AJK PM also expressed serious concern over the arrest of human rights activist Khurram Parvez in "Indian Occupied Jammu and Kashmir" (IOJK). He urged international human rights organizations to play their role in Parvez's release.

'GB: a dream unfulfilled'

Dawn, November 24, 2021

On November 01, the people of Gilgit-Baltistan (GB) celebrate their independence day. The latter marks the day on which the Gilgit scouts led by their local officers ousted the Dogra rulers in 1947. With the fall of the Kashmir raj there was a vacuum in governance, the leaders of the uprising established an independent state of GB and unconditionally acceded to Pakistan. These trusting people acceded in good faith, firmly believing that their dark night of oppression had ended. Little did they know that it was the beginning of another dark era. The Pakistan government treated their accession as a trivial development. The area was not even accorded the status of a regular district. Instead, it was treated as a political agency akin to the unruly tribal areas. The status of the region was further degraded when Sardar Muhammad Alam Khan, a tehsildar was posted as a political agent and tasked with administering an area of 73,000 square kilometres and a million-strong population.

After two years of this flawed governance, without consulting the locals, the government signed the infamous Karachi Agreement 1949 with the Kashmiri leadership surrendering its control of GB to the federation. To exacerbate the situation, the redundant Amritsar Treaty of 1940 between the British Raj and Hari Singh was used to define the region as disputed territory. This form of unaccountable governance continued till 1973. Between, 1994-2018, the government resorted to presidential decrees to implement the so-called political reform by issuing eight administrative orders for quelling the residents' demand for the integration of GB into Pakistan. The linchpin of these rationalisations was the dubious linkage of GB to the Kashmir issue, and the palliatives were cosmetic decrees of self-rule reminiscent of the imperial 'constitutional reforms' envisaged for India by the British Raj.

Dismayed by the broken promises of various governments, civil society petitioned the Supreme Court of Pakistan, leading to the 1999 verdict which asserted that the locals were "citizens of Pakistan for all intents and purposes" and could "invoke constitutionally guaranteed fundamental rights". The Supreme Court has re-endorsed this judgement. After two years of deliberation, the committee submitted a comprehensive report in 2017, proposing a provisional provincial status for GB based on its assessment of the implications for the Kashmir issue. Time is running out for the region as great changes are taking place and GB now which has captured international attention. According to media reports, the government has finalized draft constitutional amendments to confer on GB provisional provincial status along with all the privileges and obligations of a federating unit. Sources have revealed that the Pakistan Foreign Office, only to assert their position, is objecting to an amendment in Article 1 of the Constitution for defining the status of GB and insisting that the proposed change be incorporated in Article 258. Practically this may serve the purpose, but it does cast into doubt about the sincerity of the federation. Given the growing demand for constitutional rights by the locals, urgent action by the government of Pakistan is imperative due to the following factors:

1. Strategic location of GB in the 'great game'.
2. Importance of GB as a direct gateway to China Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) with potential for another route. Any political unrest can imperil this fortune-transforming project for Pakistan.
3. Vast mineral resources and hydropower potential that can help the region generate energy for the country.
4. In the last elections to the local assembly, all political parties promised provisional provincial status to GB.
5. The inordinate delay in according provisional provincial status is leading to frustration amongst the residents, thus providing leverage to hostile elements that want to breed dissent by exploiting GB's undefined status.

It is time to forge ahead with the integration of GB as a provisional province before these vested interests once more derail this positive development and imperil the outcome for GB and Pakistan.

Pakistan Army holds a three-day lunar festival in the Astore district

The Express Tribune, November 28, 2021

A three-day lunar festival organised by the Pakistan Army for the local people and youth of the mountainous Astore district of Gilgit-Baltistan (GB) came to an end on Sunday. The festival aimed to promote healthy activities among the populace of the region and to strengthen the goodwill between the locals and the army. The festival featured cricket, volleyball, tug-of-war, weightlifting, athletics, horse racing, sheep racing, sack racing, and other sports as well as speech competitions. A free medical camp for the needy was also organized during the festival, where 103 patients were examined, and free medicines were distributed.

The residents of the area and the district administration were also briefed on the equipment and weapons used in the snow-capped mountains. The district administration of Astore had cooperated with the Pakistan army in organizing the fair and provided assistance to people from remote areas in reaching the fair.

Hurriyat leader Altaf Ahmed Bhat, while referring to the recent incident in Haider Pura, said that India has been trying to “suppress the voice of the oppressed Kashmiri people” from the very first day its “occupation forces” entered Kashmir. He stressed that the Kashmiri people have “strong dedication, enthusiasm and love for Pakistan”, and that is the reason “Indian occupation forces” are punishing them to break their will of freedom.
